The Legal Practice Council confirms no leak of the Attorney's admission examination papers

On 20 August 2019 the Legal Practice Council (LPC) received reports of possible leakages of the Attorney's Admission Examination papers which are currently underway. The Council would like to confirm that all due diligence was undertaken to ensure that the examination papers were properly and safely stored. They are only released to the examination venues in the morning of the examination. However, the LPC invites any person with credible information of the leakage of the papers prior to the examination sitting to come forward with evidence.

"We would like to urge all those who are writing and preparing for exams to concentrate on their preparations and not be distracted by these unverified rumours that can cause unnecessary distraction. The LPC is committed in ensuring that the exams are fair and credible, and we have put strict measures in place to safeguard all aspects of the examination process" said Ms. Charity Nzuza, Acting Executive Officer, Legal Practice Council.
